

PAYMENT ORDERED FOR IMPROVEMENT WILL ENFORCE OLD ROAD REGULATIONS

Council Passed Resolution to Issue Warrants for $4,000 on North Chestnut Street Pavement. Police Department Will Require All Vehicles in the City to "Keep to The Right."

PETITION FILED FOR ALLEY STATE LAW MAKES PROVISION

Mayor Appoints Dr. L. B. Hill to Fill The Vacancy on The Board of Public Health. Police Declare Accidents Can Be Avoided by Drivers Following The Old Custom.

The adoption of a resolution providing for the issuance of warrants amounting to $4,000 on the N. Chestnut street improvement, the appointment of Dr. L. B. Hill as a member of the board of health, the report of the assessment roll for the improvement of the alley in the interurban block and the order for the plans and specification for the improvement of the city park were the principal features recorded at the regular meeting of the city council last night. Mayor Allen Swope and all the members were present.

The report of the city engineer was read showing the amount of work which has been done by the contractors on North Chestnut street. A resolution was also read providing that the contractors be given warrants to the amount of $4,000 in part payment for the improvement. The resolution was prepared by the city attorney and was based upon the law which gives the contractors the right to collect sixty-five per cent of the amount when the work is completed and before it has been formally accepted by the council.

A petition was filed asking for an alley running east and west in block "W" which is bounded on the north by Bruce street, on the east by Walnut street, on the west by Poplar street and on the south by Brown street. The petition stated that the alley was needed in order to comply with the sanitary regulations of the city. F. W. Wesner was present and made a short talk in favor of the petition. He pointed out that at the present time there was no alley in that block and that the petition had been signed by three fourths of the property owners. He said that an alley was needed in order to furnish a place where receptacles for ashes, garbage and trash could be kept so that it would not be necessary to place them upon the street in front of the house. Several of the councilmen stated that they were acquainted with the conditions there and were in favor of the alley, but the request was referred to the board of public works.

Councilman Sherman Day reported that the brick along the I. & L. Traction line tracks were not level with the street, and upon his motion the city clerk was instructed to notify the company to make the proper repairs at once.

A bill was presented by Henry Westfall asking for $2 for burying a cat which was killed by an I. & L. car several days ago, but the councilmen believed that the city was not liable for such work and the matter was taken up with the I. & L. Company.

A number of the property owners filed a petition for a drain on Fourth street from Bill to Ewing. The mat-

Former Newspaper Man Goes to Indianapolis From Seymour and Gets in Trouble.

J. T. Norsworthy, who spent several days in Seymour the first of this week in the interest of a newspaper which he said he published at Greeley, Colo., was in trouble at Indianapolis yesterday.

A dispatch from that city is as follows:

The Greeley Inquirer, a new daily paper of Greeley county, Colorado, is to be moved to Indianapolis and published here. This announcement was made yesterday in police court by the sole owner and operator of the Inquirer (which is a Roosevelt paper), John T. Norsworthy, charged as "plain drunk."

Norsworthy surprised Judge Collins and others in court when arraigned by observing in cultured accents:

"It is with great humility that I admit I may have seemed somewhat inebriated last evening when stopped by this officer—ahem—er—that is—" he continued. "I had only three drinks of Canadian Club rye—I suffered a sunstroke recently and that, I believe, explains. I was in your pleasant city—"

Judge Collins had recovered, however, and on Norsworthy's showing that he really could care for himself he withheld judgment on the charge of drunkenness and released him. Patrolman Gibson said Norsworthy asked him where Illinois was, and became angry when Gibson said, "state or street?"

Norsworthy said he was here closing up his business arrangements for transplanting the Inquirer in Indianapolis.

Commissioner Hall Tells Committee He Will Supervise Repair of Roads Leading to Seymour.

INTERESTED IN THE PLANS Favors Appointment of General Superintendent Who Would Have Complete Charge of Repairs.

The good roads committee of the Seymour Commercial Club held their second meeting Thursday night and took up the further discussion of plans for the betterment of the county highways. County Commissioner Sherman Hall, who has charge of the roads in this township, was present at the meeting at the request of the members and assured them that he would give the roads closer attention during the next few months. He was much interested in the plan to better the highways and said that he would aid in whatever way he could.

Mr. Hall was informed of the deplorable condition of the various roads leading into Seymour and he was thoroughly convinced that something should be done at once. He said that he had given the road superintendents instructions regarding the repair of the highways and that in a number of cases his orders had not been carried out. He stated that he was in favor of placing one man in charge of all the roads in the county and make him responsible for their condition. He pointed out that the advantage of this system would be that it would be necessary for this general superintendent to show results for his work in order to hold his position. The district superintendents would then be under the supervision of the commissioner or the general superintendent, and he could give the work his special attention and would have time to see that his instructions were carried out as given. Under the present system the work is left very largely to the superintendents, and as no special system of repairing is set out, every one may repair the roads according to his own idea with the result that some of the highways are not kept in first class condition.

Mr. Hall told the committee that he had given special attention to the sandy hills in his district and was at loss to know in what manner they could be properly improved. Mr. Davison said that the trouble with most of the hills, as well as with the highways, was that a proper system of drainage was not provided and that the roads could not be improved until the ditches were cleaned out and an outlet for the water afforded. He pointed out as an example the hill on Seventh street, which was formerly very sandy, but was placed in fair condition although the principal work done on it was the opening of the ditches on either side of the road.

Mr. Hall stated that in about two weeks he would spend practically all of his time in supervising the repair of the principal roads leading into Seymour and will give them his personal attention, and see that his orders are carried out by his superintendents.

Several other plans regarding the repair of the roads were discussed, some of which will probably be taken up after Mr. Hall completes his work.

William Shapiro Gives Important Information Regarding Sensational New York Murder.

EVIDENCE GIVEN PROSECUTOR

Claims That When Murder Car Was Secured Driver Was Told That No One Was in Danger.

New York, July 19.—The murder plot that brought Herman Rosenthal to his death that the gambler might tell no tales is hourly being brought closer to the "police system."

William Shapiro, part owner of the "murder car," is giving the public prosecutor information bit by bit that strengthens the belief that the slayer of Rosenthal did not spring from the enmity of a gamblers' clique. Shapiro admits that when his motor car was engaged he was told that policemen had knowledge of what was going to happen and that nobody was in any danger.

Bald Jack Rose, gambler, and a friend of Police Lieutenant Becker and who surrendered himself to the police, has given the name of a gambler and a gun fighter who was in the car the night that Rosenthal was shot down in front of the Hotel Metropole. His name is Schapps.

THE SCRAP BOOK

50,000 OLD HORSES FOR FOOD.

Starting figures as to the volume of the traffic in worn-out horses between Great Britain and the Continent are contained in the report recently issued of the departmental committee which has considered the best means of developing British export trade in live stock.

The total number of British and Irish horses exported in 1910 was 59,149, valued at £1,293,938. More than 50,000 of these horses (valued at £614,451) were sent to the low countries—19,957 to Holland and 30,206 to Belgium—and it is evident that most of these were intended for slaughter, as the average value was only about £11 and £13 respectively.

The total British export of live stock last year, mainly for breeding purposes, was as follows:

Horses	£1,293,938
Cattle	198,379
Sheep	62,264
Pigs	9,236

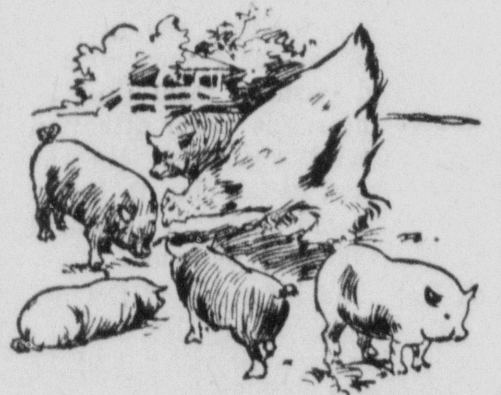

£1,563,817
British pedigree animals found their way to all parts of the world, and Japanese buyers are now making large purchases at agricultural shows in Great Britain.

FOOTBALL IN ENGLAND.

English chemists estimate that nearly 2,500,000 tons of coal are wasted every year in the British Isles in the form of soot. Experiments in the city of Leeds have shown that at least 220 tons of soot are deposited annually over each square mile of the city's area. Glass plates exposed in the center of Leeds became coated with about 24 times as much tarry soot as in a locality nine miles away. The black deposit chokes vegetation by checking transpiration and assimilation, thins the foliage of trees and reduces the quantity and quality of garden products. The solid particles, too, diminish the sunlight. In 1907 the center of Leeds had but 1,167 hours of sunlight, as compared with 1,402 hours at Adel, four miles distant, a loss of 17 per cent and the actual intensity of light was reduced fully 40 per cent. The greatest soot-fall yet recorded occurs in the city of London, where about 650 tons are deposited annually on each square mile of surface.

ABANDONED CHICKS FOR PIGS.

A Washington hen abandoned her brood of chicks to care for a litter of Poland China pigs whose mother died soon after their birth. The hen calls the pigs around her with the same cluck-cluck with which she formerly summoned her chicks, and they are fed from a bottle by the farmer's daughter. The animals follow the fowl about the barnyard in the most contented way imaginable. While unable to cover them at night, the hen squats among them and croons her good-night lullaby as if the four-legged creatures were her own.

UNTO THE THIRD GENERATION.

Mrs. Ann Jones of Oakland, Cal., finds it harder than most people to escape the universal name, Jones. Also her mother's maiden name, it was also the name of her first husband and a few days ago she married Owen F. Jones. Mrs. Jones said her mother's maiden name was Deborah Jones, her father's name was John Jones. They were no relation before marriage. Her first husband's name was Joseph Jones. Joseph Jones was no relation to Owen F. Jones.

DIVER CAUGHT BY OCTOPUS.

A naval diver at Toulon, Southern France, was suddenly attacked the other day by a great octopus while under water in the harbor. He gave the hoisting signal and was hauled to the surface, together with the octopus, whose tentacles, 25 feet long, were wrapped around him. The diver was unconscious. The octopus held fast to the diver until it was stabbed to death. It weighed 135 pounds and the suckers on its tentacles were as big as five-shilling pieces.

With a sigh of benevolence, Amos K. Klam handed over the money.
Ten years later Amos K. Klam was in distress. He needed just $10,000 to save him from disgrace.
A tall, thin man, with one eye, appeared.

"You are Amos K. Klam?" said the visitor.

"Yes, yes," exclaimed the banker. "Heaven has sent you."

"Correct," said the visitor, as he drew for a great wallet. "I have here a work that will interest you. It is the history of the world in 69 volumes—profusely illustrated—bound in morocco—edited by Prof. Highbrow. Our terms—"

But Amos K. Klam had fainted.

"Well, on the frankness of that statement I propose to vote for you."

FIGHT ON TURKEY PARASITES

Youngsters Must Be Protected From Excessive Heat and Dampness, Says Government Bulletin.

No kind of young poultry is so susceptible to the effects of unfavorable conditions as the young turkey. They must be carefully protected from the attacks of parasites, and from excessive heat and dampness, says a government bulletin, until they have gained sufficient strength and size to wander away with the parent turkeys and care for themselves on the range.

The chief danger from lice and mites attacks to the poult is directly after the poult is hatched, but the best remedy is to deal with the hen before the young are hatched. The plumage of the hen should be dusted with insect powder, and close down to the skin from head to hock joint, being careful not to get it into the eyes. This should be done at least twice a week until two or three days before hatching.

The most careful attentions should be given to this. Never use lime or sulphur for this purpose. Nothing is better than some insect powder, if it does not contain ingredients that are injurious to the eyes.

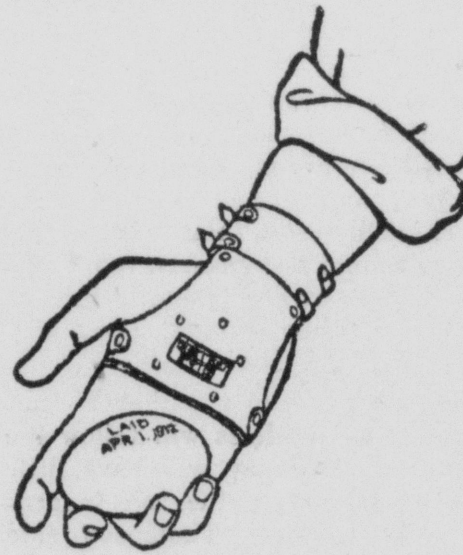

It may often occur, however, that the hen will not have been properly treated, and also the lice and mites will be found on the young, and in order that the poult may live and thrive, they must be freed of these enemies. As soon as the young are ready to leave the nest they must be examined carefully for lice, which may be on the top of the head, under the throat or about the wings or vent. Some of them are gray in color and difficult to see.

They may be destroyed by the use of sweet oil, rubbing a small amount upon the head and throat; insect powder is sufficient for the other parts of the body. It is very important that only a small amount of the sweet oil be used, as too much is injurious. Kerosene should never be used to destroy parasites.

ODD WAY FOR DATING EGGS

Rubber Stamp Held in Place in Palm of Hand Performs the Operation—Type Removable.

A Minnesota man has patented an ingenious device for putting the date on eggs. It consists of a rubber stamp of removable type which fits into apertures in the palm of a glove-like cover which is strapped around palm of the hand. As each egg is picked out of the nest the date is imprinted upon it, and there is no necessity to going all over the day's "crop" after they have been collected. The type, of course, is inked from time to time.

Remedy for Diarrhoea.

When simple remedies fail to correct diarrhoea in birds, give the following: Subnitrate of bismuth, one to four grains twice each day, or pulverized cinnamon bark, two grains twice each day. The soft feed given the bird should be dry or as nearly dry as possible. In case the trouble is checked too abruptly, give from 20 to 30 grains of salts in a tablespoonful of water. One or two grains of calomel in soft water is also a good corrective.

Feed dry feeds—no mashes. For the first feeds use plenty of dry oatmeal.

Now is the best time to try your breeding stock.

Chills, wet food and lack of sunshine are the main causes of bowel trouble in chicks.

Where the dropping boards are made of matched lumber the job of cleaning them is easier.

This is a good time to put a square of tar paper in the bottom of each nest box for the benefit of lice.

If a new poultry house is to be built this spring see if there isn't a sandy spot handy on which to locate it.

If all the chickens and full-grown hens run together, the stronger chickens will get most of the feed and keep the others poor.

In operating brooders remember that uniform heat should always be maintained. It is better to have a little too much heat than too little.

NEW YORK'S BIG POLICE SCANDAL

Gotham Shocked By the Accumulating Evidence.

GOING TO GET TO BOTTOM OF IT

Private Funds Have Been Placed at the Disposal of District Attorney Whitman to Put Burns Sleuths on the Trail in an Effort to Run Down Evidence of Alleged Police Graft Murder Conspiracy.

New York, July 19.—When Bald Jack Rose, Lieutenant Becker's friend, surrendered and William Shapiro, part owner of the car Rose hired for Rosenthal's killers, admitted that he had been told when the car was engaged that policemen had knowledge of what his passengers were going to do and that nobody was in any danger, the hunt for the men who killed Herman Rosenthal quickened.

Bald Jack told a tale to the district attorney of the busiest night he ever spent in his life—last Monday night—when he worked up evidence for his friend Becker against Rosenthal and then went on the auto ride that had for its purpose the death of Rosenthal. The most important part of his revelations was the name of a gambler and gang fighter who rode in the Libby-Shapiro car with him and Itzke and Shapiro. This man's name is Schaaps and half the police department are sweeping the town for him.

Looks Bad for the Police.

Shapiro's story offered to the district attorney—as evidence that the man in his fear and hatred of the police is willing to become a state's witness if the district attorney will let him—emphasized Mr. Whitman's belief that the killing of Rosenthal did not spring from the enmity of a clique of gamblers. Mr. Whitman did not question Shapiro, but he will collect the details of Shapiro's information and estimate their value. In line with Shapiro's hints comes information from an official department to the district attorney, "that it looks, after all, as if policeman had been mixed up in the Rosenthal case."

This factor in the situation has produced two new features. Mayor Gaynor, not satisfied with the explanation that Rosenthal was slain in a gambler's feud, has begun an investigation to determine what policemen might have had an interest in Rosenthal's murder.

William J. Burns, who conferred with the district attorney today, will have men at work on this feature of the case immediately. The county has no funds to pay Burns, but the money has been promised by private citizens who want to see what they consider the most shocking scandal in years cleared up.

COMPLETED TRAGEDY

Remorseful Young Murderer Takes His Own Wasted Life.

New York, July 19.—Nathan Schwartz, suspect in the cruel murder of twelve-year-old Julia Connors and then branded by father and sister as a murderer, was found, a suicide, in a room at 219 Chrystie street, where he had lived since the day following the finding of the child's body within a few blocks of police headquarters. Door, cracks and windows were stuffed with clothing and a tube hung down from a fixture into the dead man's mouth, the gas still escaping. About the walls, on the margins of the newspapers that littered the floor, even on a collar in a corner, was scrawled in disjointed sentences a confession of the horrid crime, with a statement that in killing himself he was following his father's advice. Samuel Schwartz, the father of the boy, positively identified the body. The father repeated to the coroner what he had told the grand jury about Nathan's confession to him, and recognized the handwriting on the scraps of paper and walls, thereby officially establishing his son as the slayer of the Bronx girl.

Ley de Fuga For Ivonet.

Havana, July 19.—General Ivonet, the rebel commander-in-chief since the death of General Estenoz, was killed yesterday at a farm twelve miles from Santiago, after the small party accompanying him had been captured. The official report says he was trying to escape, which is the Mexican method known as "Ley de Fuga."

WHITMAN CHARGES N. Y. POLICE WITH MURDER.

"I accuse the police department of New York, through certain members of it, with having murdered Herman Rosenthal. Either directly or indirectly it was because of them that he was slain in cold blood, with never a chance for his life."

"Just as he was about to give important additional evidence and to give the names of eight or ten men who could and would support his charges, just as he was preparing to come to my house with these matters so as to avail himself of privacy, just as the situation shapes up most dangerously for the police involved, he is killed, and with him dies his evidence."

"There were five policemen within 300 feet of the shooting when it took place."

"Two were within 100 feet of it; one was within fifty feet of it."

"Yet five men were able to shoot to pieces the head of a grand jury witness, get into an automobile and escape without being even seriously inconvenienced, and this at 2 o'clock in the morning in a brightly lighted street forty feet off Broadway and in front of a place that was filled with people."

"From where the farthest away policeman stood, on Broadway just around the corner from the Metropolitan, it took just fifteen seconds to reach the spot by running. The nearest policeman was less than two seconds away. Yet not one of the five got near enough to threaten the murderers."—Statement by District Attorney Whitman.

A "SNAP" FOR THIS FEDERAL PRISONER

"Wireless" Wilson Enjoying a Mysterious Outing.

New York, July 19.—The president of the United Wireless company, Colonel Christopher C. Wilson, who a year ago last May was sentenced to three years in the federal prison at Atlanta after he and his associates had been convicted of using the mails to defraud, is not in the Atlanta prison and he is not in the Tombs, nor is he in the Ludlow jail. In fact, the only persons who say they have run across Wireless Wilson lately, or since he was brought here from Atlanta in the spring under federal custody to testify in bankruptcy proceedings, are various folk who say they have met and talked to the convicted man recently while he was having his shoes shined in lower Broadway or visiting office buildings or out around the home his wife has rented for the season at Spring Valley, N. Y.

Simultaneously with Wilson's arrival in New York in the custody of Keeper C. E. Shea of the Atlanta prison early in the spring, Mrs. Wilson, the good-looking stenographer he married Aug. 3, 1910, or the same day he was arrested on charges of conspiracy and attempt to defraud, rented a house for the summer in Spring Valley. Wilson, when he arrived in town, was taken to the Tombs. The warden said that Wireless Wilson left there, presumably to give testimony, on July 1, and that the Tombs has not seen him since. The warden added that he does not know Wilson's federal keeper, Shea, nor where he is keeping Wilson. Ludlow street said the same.

If you go out to Spring Valley all you have to do is ask a hackman at the railroad station to drive out to Colonel C. C. Wilson's house, and he does so promptly.

Governor Goes to Pleasant Lake.

Indianapolis, July 19.—Governor Marshall left last evening with Mrs. Marshall and his stenographer, for a week at Pleasant Lake. While there he will dictate a number of speeches, among them one that he will deliver on the occasion of his formal notification of his nomination. He will hold himself in readiness to go to Sea Girt, N. J., to meet Governor Wilson whenever the presidential nominee wishes him to go.

IS PREPARED TO PRESS PROTEST

Great Britain's Attitude Toward the Canal.

STATEMENT NOW ON THE WAY

International Controversy Over the Granting to American Vessels of the Free Use of Panama Canal Is Expected to Reach an Acute Stage With the Arrival of England's Supplementary Statement of Protest.

Washington, July 19.—The state department is not yet in receipt of the expected supplementary statement of the British protest against the pending proposal to permit American ships to use the Panama canal without charge. A. Mitchell Innes, charge d'affaires and counselor of the British embassy, called upon Secretary Knox to announce that he had not received any additional instructions from his government nor the formal document of protest which he had informed the department was coming. Inasmuch as the British statement had not arrived, Mr. Knox and Mr. Innes agreed they would not enter upon any discussion of the British protest at this time. Mr. Innes came down to Washington from the summer embassy at Kinco, Me., for the purpose of delivering the protest to Secretary Knox. He announced that he would remain in Washington until the document reached him.

Though the formal statement of the British position has not been received, your correspondent is able to give for the first time reasoning upon which the British protest is based. Secretary Knox, it can be said, is already in possession of the arguments which England advances in the formal document now on its way to Washington. The British government in entering the protest against the proposed legislation, will call attention to the fact that England has always acted with the utmost good feeling toward the United States, especially in regard to the isthmian canal and matters affecting South and Central America generally.

The United States will be reminded by the British government that that government cheerfully entered into an agreement facilitating the construction by the United States of the Panama canal. The removal of the difficulties in the way of the construction of the canal by the United States in the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was proof positive of this friendly spirit, it will be stated. Had Great Britain refused to eliminate this treaty by declining to negotiate the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, the United States would have been most seriously embarrassed in its endeavor to construct alone the canal.

The British government is likewise prepared to remind the United States that England gave acquiescence to the fortification of the canal by the United States while a protest against it was going up from other nations. It was assumed by England, it will be said, that the United States would coincide with the British interpretation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and open the canal on equal terms to the ships of all nations, including American ships.

Great Britain is also prepared to enter protests through her diplomatic agents here on behalf of the ships owned by Canadian railroads against the provision in the pending bill barring railroad-owned ships from the use of the canal.

It is now expected that if congress by its decision in the matter of tolls obliges the state department to defend its right to give American ships the free use of the canal, the government will rest its case mainly upon the statement that in the opinion of the United States such a thing is not in violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. In many quarters it is believed this position would be the strongest one for this government to assume in case congress decides in favor of a free use of the canal for American ships.

STRENUOUS LIFE

How Railway Engineers Sometimes Are Pushed to the Limit.

New York, July 19.—Men who pilot heavy tonnage freight trains down steep grades and through all kinds of weather told the arbitration board at Manhattan Beach the ins and outs of their business. The arbitration commissioners in the wage dispute heard why it sometimes takes as long as sixteen hours to get a mile of cars over a short division and how when the roads were getting ready for the threatened coal strike a few months ago, the men were worked sixteen hours a day until they had reached the limit of endurance. These witnesses seemed to make the best impression of any that the engineers have put on the stand. One of the youngest engineers before the board was W. J. Jackson, who takes the slow freights over the mountain division of the Pennsylvania. He said he has been on the road thirteen years. Jackson told how he once had been in the cab for seventy-seven hours.

"Did you sleep any of the time?" he was asked.

"I did," he replied, "and I'd like to see the man alive who wouldn't have. Of course we were on sidings part of the time."

MORE LIGHT ON THE PARKER CAMPAIGN

Senate Committee Hears Testimony of Mr. Sheehan.

Washington, July 19.—According to William F. Sheehan of New York, who was a member of the executive committee of the Democratic national committee in the 1904 campaign, approximately $1,000,000 was contributed for the Democratic fight in that year. The committee itself handled directly only about $800,000. Mr. Sheehan made these statements before the senate committee that is investigating campaign contributions.

"I do not think," he said, "of anyone except Mr. Belmont who gave more than $5,000."

In answer to questions witness said that he had solicited some funds; that Colonel Lamont was very actively engaged in raising funds and he succeeded in raising some, how much witness did not know.

"We made it a rule," he said, "not to accept money from trusts. I do not believe a dollar of money was accepted by the Democratic campaign committee directly or indirectly from trusts in 1904. There was a sum of $10,000 contributed by the American Sugar Refining company to the New York state committee. We requested those in charge of the state headquarters to return that check, and that was done."

TO INTEREST THE BOYS AND GIRLS

Agricultural Extension Work to Be Pushed.

INDIANA LEADS OTHER STATES

United States Department of Agriculture Has Found Hoosier State to Be Far Ahead of All Others in Organization of Agricultural Extension Clubs in Public Schools and Will Aid in Pushing the Cause.

Lafayette, Ind., July 19.—That the agricultural extension department of Purdue university in co-operation with the United States department of agriculture will shortly put into the field in Indiana an expert organizer of boys and girls' clubs in the rural schools of the state is the announcement made by Professor George I. Christie, superintendent of that department at Purdue. Indiana is the first state to be honored by the government in undertaking this work, and some beneficial results are expected. The United States department of agriculture has found Indiana to be far ahead of other states in the organization of these boys and girls' clubs, and regards these clubs as one of the most important moves toward interesting young people in agriculture and keeping them on the farms.

The organizer, who will begin his work Sept. 1, will be in the employ of both the government and of Purdue university, and will work in all parts of Indiana, organizing the boys and girls of every country school for the purpose of stimulating interest in agriculture and its allied subjects, as well as in home making and household work for the girls. The agricultural extension department of Purdue has already organized such clubs in thirty-five counties of the state, and more than 10,000 boys and girls are already enrolled. This is far more than any other state can boast of.

Indiana is regarded as the pioneer in this work, and Prof. George I. Christie has directed practically all of the work thus far.

BANK NOT HURT

Stockholders of Geneva Bank Make Up Hale's Peculations.

Geneva, Ind., July 19.—According to the report of the examiners, William B. Hale, the assistant cashier of the Bank of Geneva, who hanged himself when the state bank examiners came to investigate his books, was a defaulter to the amount of $14,250. That amount the examiners checked against him. The directors at once ordered an assessment on the stockholders and the money necessary to pay off the shortage was raised immediately. The public was notified and the bank will continue to do business as usual.

Hale stole the $14,250 by manipulating the numbers on the certificates of deposit with a rubber stamp and made false entries in the books to correspond with them. It is believed he got away with a large amount of interest paid in and not credited. The general belief is that Hale got away with not less than $25,000 in various ways. In addition to the money taken from the bank, the filching of interest, and the "short changing" of customers, Hale spent about $7,000 placed in his hands by the mother of his first wife. And nearly all of this money went in high living and being a real sport.

Bad Blaze at Greensfork.

Richmond, Ind., July 19.—The town of Greensfork, nine miles northwest of Richmond, was the scene of a fire that caused a loss of more than $12,000 and for a time threatened to destroy the entire business district. The Odd Fellows' hall and a row of frame buildings almost a block long were destroyed.

Dropped Into Basement.

Wabash, Ind., July 19.—Seven persons were injured, four seriously, at the Wabash Canning company's plant, when a section of the first floor collapsed, dropping the seven employees, all women, into the basement, fifteen feet below. On top of them crashed down thousands of cans of peas and corn.

DENEEN POWERLESS TO NAME A SENATOR

Illinois Attorney General Interprets Situation.

Springfield, Ill., July 19.—Attorney General Stead holds, in a lengthy opinion submitted to Governor Deneen, that there is no vacancy in the office of senator in the congress of the United States at this time from the state of Illinois, within the meaning of the second paragraph of Section 2 of Article I of the constitution of the United States.

The attorney general holds that the governor has not the power to appoint a senator, following the action of the United States senate in declaring the election of William Lorimer void.

The attorney general says the senate, having determined that Lorimer's election was invalid, it follows that, so far as the question of the power of the governor to appoint is concerned, the situation is the same as if the legislature of Illinois in 1909 had made no attempt to elect a senator to succeed Albert J. Hopkins, whose regular term expired on March 3, 1909.

In other words, the legal effect of the determination of the senate that the election of Lorimer was invalid, is that the legislature of Illinois in 1909 failed to elect a senator.

Another Disaster Reported to Have Befallen French Navy.

Toulon, July 19.—It is reported that there has been a naval disaster off the coast of Corsica. It is said that the destroyer Le Cavalier foundered after a collision with a battleship.

The warships have signalled to all stations to cease their wireless messages in order to allow uninterrupted urgent dispatches from the battleship Voltaire at Corsica to Toulon.

Woman Track Walker Killed.

Lafayette, Ind., July 19.—Mrs. Charlotte Erickson, aged seventy-two, was run down and killed by a Wabash road passenger train. Mrs. Erickson did not see a passenger train approaching and shortly after she stepped on the track she was struck and hurled twenty-five feet to the right of the track. Her neck was broken. Mrs. Erickson was a life-long resident of the city.

NEW PARTY TO NAME
A COUNTY TICKET

Convention Will Be Called on July 29 to Elect Delegates to Progressive State Convention.

COUNTY HAS 13 DELEGATES

County Chairman Will Name The
The Members of the Central Committee in a Few Days.

The new progressive party will place a complete county ticket in the field this fall according to an announcement made today by County Chairman Noble Moore. Joseph Overstreet, of Franklin, is the district chairman of the Fourth district and has appointed Mr. Moore as the chairman of Jackson county. The first convention of the new party will be held on July 29, at which time delegates will be selected to the state convention to be held at Indianapolis on Thursday, August 1.

Under the plan of organization stated in the call for organization and the state convention, the county chairman of each county will appoint one member from each precinct in his county, which will be known as the central committee. Mr. Moore has not yet completed the committee in this county but will have the same ready for publication sometime next week. The call stated that this plan of organization has been adopted because it can be perfected in the shortest possible time and also "because it insures an organization composed of men who are known to be loyal to the progressive principles that have called into existence this party."

The state call is issued to "all citizens of the State of Indiana, who, without regard to past political affiliations, desire to cooperate with and take part in the progressive movement." The purpose of the state convention is to adopt a platform for the coming campaign for the purpose of nominating two delegates-at-large and two alternates to the national progressive convention, and also the selection of thirteen other delegates and a like number of alternates of the national convention from each of the thirteen congressional districts. At the same time the electors and alternates and the candidates for the state ticket will be nominated.

The convention will be composed of 1,441 delegates apportioned among the several counties of the state on the basis of one delegate for each 500 votes cast by Republican, Democrat, Socialist and Prohibition parties, for their first election-at-large at the presidential election held in November 1908, and one delegate for additional fraction of 250 votes or more cast. According to this apportionment, Jackson county is entitled to thirteen delegates. The county call will be published in a few days.

The county chairman states that a number of democrats, several of whom have held county offices, have stated that they will assist in the organization of the new party although their names have not yet been made public.

It has not yet been decided whether a congressional ticket will be nominated or not as this matter will probably be determined at the state convention.

MANY REPUBLICANS WANT TO MAKE RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Charles A. Carlisle Is Making An Open
Campaign for the Head of The Ticket.

That Addison C. Harris of Indianapolis and Winfield T. Durbin of Anderson are being considered seriously as aspirants to the Republican gubernatorial nomination appeared yesterday when party workers discussed the probable outcome of the contest. Both names were mentioned several months ago, particularly that of Mr. Harris, but recently the discussion has turned to others, and it was not known to what extent the two were figuring in the race until yesterday.

Mr. Harris is on his annual fishing trip in Canada, and he probably will not return to Indianapolis until after the Republican state convention, Aug. 6. It is understood that, while he is not an avowed candidate for the nomination in the sense of seeking the office, he would accept it if given an opportunity. It was said yesterday that friends of Mr. Harris are watching the Republican situation with the hope of bringing about his nomination if the conditions are favorable at the time the state convention meets.

It was also understood yesterday that while Col. Durbin has not been in Indianapolis attending to any political fences, he has friends here who are looking after his welfare.

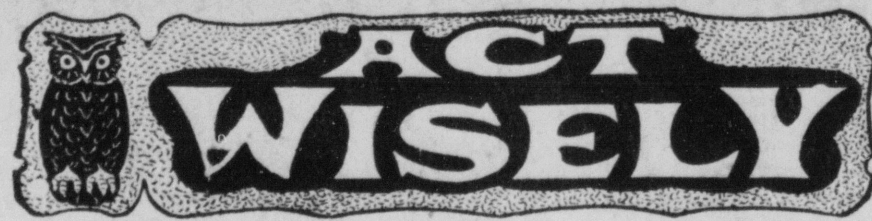

The fact that Mayor Shank has been the only "vocal" candidate for the nomination is not an indication that there are no others. It developed yesterday that there are at least nine Republicans who would be more than merely willing to accept the party leadership this fall.

The list includes the names of Col. Durbin and Mr. Harris, D. W. Henry of Terre Haute, Judge Walter N. Olds of Fort Wayne, Hugh Th. Miller of Columbus, James Wade Emison of Vincennes, Mayor Shank, Charles Arthur Carlisle of South Bend and William L. Taylor of Indianapolis. George B. Lockwood had been mentioned but has made an announcement that he is not in the race.

Col. Durbin served one term as Governor of Indiana. Mr. Harris was an avowed "regular" in the fight for delegates to the national convention and is a staunch supporter of President Taft. Mr. Henry, the possible candidate from Terre Haute, is supported by some of the leading politicians of the Fifth District, it is said, and similar support is given to Mr. Olds from his district. Mr. Miller served as Lieutenant Governor during the administration of Governor Hanly, and has almost the united support for the nomination now by the avowed "dry" element in the party. Mr. Carlisle's candidacy has become more vigorous during the last few weeks than it was before. It is considered unlikely by the party leaders that Mr. Taylor will make a race for the nomination, although it is believed he would accept it.

RIGHT SIDE OUT.

We are many sided.

All of us have at least two sides, some of us half a dozen. We are composite. We are two—or more—in one. In all of us are a Dr. Jekyll and a Mr. Hyde.

To illustrate:

There is you when you are crochety or grouchy or unjust. The folks at home know that side of you. You sometimes have for your own the bitter tone, though you love your own the best. Then there is you when you are on the street, in your place of business or in church aisles—smiling, amiable, cordial.

Are you, then, a hypocrite?

Not necessarily. The Mr. Hyde that is in you appears when you make sharp speeches to wife or husband or children. You are not all there. Only one side of you speaks. Afterward you regret the hasty words.

You may be likened to a revolving pedestal, painted on each side a different color.

When things go wrong at home you are Mr. Hyde. Abroad you are Dr. Jekyll. Those who know you best know you have your good side. They know the pedestal revolves.

Now—

There are rare persons who are near to always at their best—a totality of personality. They put themselves—all themselves—into every effort, and in them all things converge to a purposeful end.

That's greatness.

You and I have moments when we are at our best, when we are "all there." Every faculty works in harmony. It is in these sublime moments, these great moods, that masterpieces are made, audiences charmed, inventions created, battles won.

For a moment we are great. But, alas—

Most of us cannot long be Dr. Jekyll. The pedestal revolves. The Mr. Hyde of us shows itself.

Most of us are like the chameleon. We take on color, for the moment, from our surroundings. We are inspired for a time; then we lapse.

The good man is the man who is the right side out most of the time.

The successful man is the man who makes the most of the best side that is in him.

The great man is an ordinary man who is always at his best.

Let us, therefore, as much as may be, keep the right and not the wrong side of us out.

District Chairman.

A Trial Will Convince Anyone—The Great Kidney Remedy Never Disappoints.

A few years ago I was troubled with a complication of kidney and stomach ailments and although I tried two or three different doctors, I was unable to obtain a cure. Having heard a great deal about Swamp-Root, I decided to give it a trial and purchased a one-dollar bottle of Mr. Alexander, the druggist. From the beginning I could notice a change for the better, and after taking eight bottles of your medicine, I felt entirely cured and have not had any trouble since.

Had I used Swamp-Root sooner, I would have been a few hundred dollars to the good and saved myself a lot of suffering.

You may use my testimonial any time you wish. Yours very truly,

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson III. July 21

GROWTH OF THE KINGDOM. Mark 4: 26-32; Matt. 13: 33.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Thy kingdom come Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.—Matt. 6:10.

The portion selected from Mark for today's lesson gives us two parables, one of which, the mustard seed, is the third in the regular order in Matt. xiii, while the gradual growth of the seed is recorded by Mark only. The verse from Matthew concerning the leaven is the fourth in the series, according to Matthew, and next week's lesson on the wheat and tares is the second. We will be better able to summarize these first four or five parables after next week. Concerning them it is said, "All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables, and without a parable spake He not unto them," thus fulfilling Ps. lxxviii, 2, 3. He spake the word unto them as they were able to hear it, and when they were alone He expounded all things to His disciples (Matt. xiii, 34, 35; Mark iv, 33, 34). His repeatedly saying, "If any man have ears to hear, let him hear" (verses 9 and 23), or in the Revelation epistles, "He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches," reminds us that many are dull of hearing and makes us long for such an anointed ear as Samuel had, to whom the Lord could whisper things and give him messages for others also. The admonitions, "Take heed what ye hear," and "Take heed how ye hear" (verse 24; Luke viii, 18), were never more needed than now, for false teachers and teaching abound everywhere. Our lesson title, "The Growth of the Kingdom," is very misleading, no doubt unintentionally, but bad all the same. It arises from the idea held by so many that the kingdom began when the Spirit came, in a special way and for a special purpose, at Pentecost and has been growing ever since, whereas the truth is that the kingdom then at hand did not come and has not yet come, and when it does come it will not be gradual, but by a great catastrophe, a judgment, an overthrow of all enemies, according to Isa. xl, 4; xlii, 9-11; xxxiv, 1, 2; lxxv, 15, 16; Rev. xix, 19, 20; xx, 1-3. What then is the growth now going on, as set forth in these parables and elsewhere? We must remember in connection with all these kingdom parables His saying when they asked Him about the first one, "Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God" (verse 11). The kingdom is not growing, but the mystery more fully described in Eph. iii and elsewhere is growing.

The church, which is His body, the elect from all nations who are to share the Kingdom with Him, growth into an holy temple in the Lord (Eph. ii, 19-22). The seed of the first parable, the word of God, being faithfully sown, quietly works according to this first parable of today's lesson, the blade, the ear, the full corn in the ear, until the harvest, which we shall see in next lesson, is the end of the age. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth, is a truth on the same line. The growth of the mustard seed into a great tree, sheltering the birds of the air in its branches or under its shadow, sets forth another phase of present things. That an herb should become a great tree is something out of the regular course of things, and these birds in the branches cause us to remember that in the parable of the sower the birds or fowls represented the devil (verses 4, 15). If in a discourse the speaker uses a figure and explains it, then a little later uses the same figure, his former explanation stands. The so-called church has grown to be a vast something very different from what the Lord intended it to be, and if in the first twelve disciples there was one of whom our Lord said, "One of you is a devil" (John vi, 70), we cannot doubt but that in the great company of those who today are called Christians there may be many who for some reason other than the right one have taken refuge in the church.

As to the woman taking three measures of meal and leavening it till the whole was leavened, is it not very clear that the woman, the church, is doing that very thing, and in our day as never before? From the passover story of Ex. xii, where they were to search for and put away all leaven.

there is no place in the Bible where leaven means anything good. It is always something corrupting, and Israel was forbidden to offer it with their sacrifice (Lev. ii, 11; vi, 17). In Lev. xxiii, 15-18, where the church is typified by the first fruits, leaven was commanded because of the evil that the Spirit foresaw would be in those first fruits, but it was met by the sacrifice of the next verse. In Amos iv, 5, they were told that offering with leaven was just like them and their sinful ways. When Sarah baked cakes quickly for her visitors she took three measures of meal, but we are sure that she had no time to use leaven (Gen. xviii, 6). Our Lord taught the disciples to beware of the leaven, or false teaching of Pharisees and Sadducees (Matt. xvi, 6, 12), and the Spirit by Paul said, Let us keep the feast with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth (I Cor. v, 8). This age of the mystery of the kingdom, the calling out of the church while the kingdom is postponed, is marvelously set forth in these parables by Him who knew all.

THE LESSON QUIZ.

The Growth of the Kingdom. Mark iv 26-32; Matt. xiii 33.

Golden Text—Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as in heaven. Matt. vi 10.

(1) Verse 26—What does "the kingdom of God" here stand for?

(2) What seed is here referred to and what is the ground in which it is sown?

(3) Whom does the "Man" represent which sows the seed and how is the seed sown?

(4) Verse 27—After a minister or teacher or any other Christian has sown the seed of the gospel ought he to be restless or anxious concerning its growth? Give your reasons.

(5) What is the proof that the seed of the gospel will when sown always bring forth its proper fruit?

(6) Verse 28—The earth produces a great variety of things by self propagation, without human instrumentality. Would you say, or not, and why, that Christianity is in any measure analogous to this? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(7) In preaching the gospel in heathen lands what are generally the first results and what are the various stages in the process toward the ripe fruit of Christianity?

(8) What is the meaning of "the full corn in the ear" as applied to the fruit of Christianity?

(9) Verse 29—When the seed of the gospel is sown in a human heart or in a country does it ever die without germinating even if years intervene without visible fruit? Give your reasons.

(10) What is the earthly fruit of Christianity?

(11) Who are they that reap the harvest and enjoy the fruit of the gospel?

(12) When will the final harvest of Christianity be reaped and what will it be?

(13) Verse 30—What would you compare the kingdom of God to and what are some of the other comparisons which Jesus makes elsewhere?

(14) Verses 31-32—What are some things like the mustard seed, exceedingly small, upon which vast issues depend?

(15) What evidence or incidents can you give to illustrate the fact that the small mustard seed becomes a very large bush?

(16) In what respect or in how many respects is Christianity like the mustard seed?

(17) What is the quality in the gospel of Jesus which makes its seed so fertile?

(18) Matt. xiii 33—Whom does the woman in this parable stand for?

(19) What does the leaven here represent?

(20) What will be the final effect of Christianity upon this nation?

GIRLS' TOMATO CLUB.

Perhaps no woman in Tennessee is doing a more practical and helpful work than Miss Virginia Pearl Moore, who is at the head of the School Improvement work of the state, and who has recently been appointed by the Bureau of Education of the United States, organizer for Tennessee of girls' tomato clubs. For some time the United States government, through its bureau of education, has been encouraging boys to take an interest in agricultural activities by the organization of corn clubs, potato clubs, etc., and now the department, realizing that the girls must be kept on the farm, as well as the boys, is organizing tomato clubs among the girls all over the country. Miss Moore has been appointed state organizer of these clubs in Tennessee, and though she only received her appointment a few months ago, there are now about 1,000 Tennessee girls enrolled in the various tomato clubs of the state, says the Knoxville Journal and Tribune. The object of the work is to afford girls in the rural districts an intelligent interest and an income, that they may be kept on the farms happy and satisfied instead of coming to the city where they join the anemic procession of mill and shop girls.

"The law does not permit a man to leave his wife just because she nags him," Justice Marean decides. He meant, of course, the law of this state, says the New York Mail. In Kentucky, Missouri and other states, "ungovernable temper" and "indignities" are a cause not only for separation, but for absolute divorce and nagging may certainly be carried to the point of indignity; while in Oregon one may obtain a divorce if the partner of one's joys, and especially of one's sorrows, "makes life burdensome." And what can be more burdensome than nagging? However, there ought not to be divorce, nor even separation, for nagging, because no court of justice can ever be sure that the nagging is not justified, or at least provoked. Some women, for instance, are born naggers. Some achieve nagging, and a considerable numbers of others have nagging thrust upon them by a course of conduct which may be outwardly courteous, but which in its essence is insupportably irritating.

There have been royal journalists as well as royal authors. George III. contributed seven articles to the Annals of Agriculture, a monthly magazine, edited by Arthur Young. These were published under the pseudonym of Ralph Robinson, and, according to one of his biographers, "display a most profound knowledge of agriculture." Louis XVIII. was a journalist of quite another type, says the London Chronicle. For some years after his accession to the throne he was in the habit of sending anonymous political articles to various Paris dailies. Some of the opinions expressed in these were so advanced that the king had the pleasure of seeing them vetoed by his own censor.

Two months ago a Boston girl saved a man from drowning. The other day they were married. But it is rather hard, if this is a precedent, that, in addition to the exceptional chances of leap year, women nowadays have to be life-savers into the bargain.

A Pennsylvania judge has ruled that there are times when a man is justified in beating his wife. Gentlemen, however, will still confine beating their wives solely to pedro and sixty-six.

STRONG AID FOR TEMPERANCE

Emperor William of Germany and Other Members of Royalty in Europe Favor Total Abstinence.

An interesting trio of facts has recently attracted the notice not only of temperance workers everywhere, but of the general public as well, showing the growing attitude of royalty toward drink and the liquor traffic in Europe.

The address made a short time ago by the Emperor William to the German students urging them to abolish beer-drinking bouts in their societies, roused widespread interest in the cause of temperance in Germany and attracted the attention of leaders in the movement in other countries. Still later, in opening the new naval academy at Mewrick, the Emperor William read an order-in-council laying stress upon the qualifications necessary to naval officers, and later speaking extemporaneously made a plea for temperance on the part of the cadets.

In his temperance talk he cautioned the cadets against excessive drinking, which he said undermined the nerves, and the strenuous naval service of today required strong nerves. He counseled total abstinence, and added impressively that "the nation which in the future used the smallest amount of alcohol would march at the head of the column on the fields of art and war."

Quite recently also, the king of Belgium attended an anti-alcoholic manifestation organized by the United Belgian Temperance societies. He listened with attention to eloquent addresses by the Catholic primate of Belgium, Monsiegnor Mercier, and the great French barrister, Monsieur Henry Robert. But by his own presence he did more for the popularization of teetotalism than the most eloquent speeches, as was remarked by Monsieur Robert.

Some weeks ago the future king of Sweden, Prince Gustavus, was the chief speaker in a meeting organized by Swedish Good Templars. He was pleased to take the lead in the temperance cause, he declared, and with such royal patronage it is easy to picture the rapid spread of the reform during the coming reign of this Scandinavian ruler.

A trade union secretary has the following pointed paragraph set forth in notes commenting on labor conditions in general: "A class of workmen who figure somewhat frequently on the unemployed list are the tipplers. There is no room for dram-drinkers in the workshop of the present day. The drunken workman is rigidly kept on the outside of the workshop gates, because his presence inside is a danger both to himself and others, and the tippler will soon be sent to keep him company for the same reason."

"Much is being said in certain quarters concerning the effects of intoxicating drink on the question of unemployment. No one who is acquainted with the conditions of workshop life would contend for a moment that drink has any appreciable effect on the volume of unemployment, but it is an important factor in determining who are to be employed. Other things being equal, the non-drinking, non-sporting workman has by far a better chance of finding employment, and of keeping it, than his tippling or sporting fellow."

LIQUOR AND LIFE INSURANCE

Total Abstainers in New York Company Each Year Draw Increased Dividends.

Dr. G. H. Heald, in a recent issue of "Life and Health," mentions a striking instance of the benefits of total abstinence in the matter of life insurance.

A certain life insurance company doing business in New York, he states, has since 1900 kept a separate record of abstainers insured in the total abstinence department of the company. These total abstinence policies each year draw increased dividends, which materially reduce the cost of insurance.

It may be explained that many insurance companies issue annual dividends or refunds based upon the actual gains of the companies, resulting from the fact that the actual mortality is less than the calculated mortality shown in the tables. In the temperance department of this company, as in others, it is found that the dividend or amount returned to the policyholders is considerably larger than it is in the general department, because the actual mortality in that department is less proportionately than in the general department.

Lincoln on the Liquor Traffic.

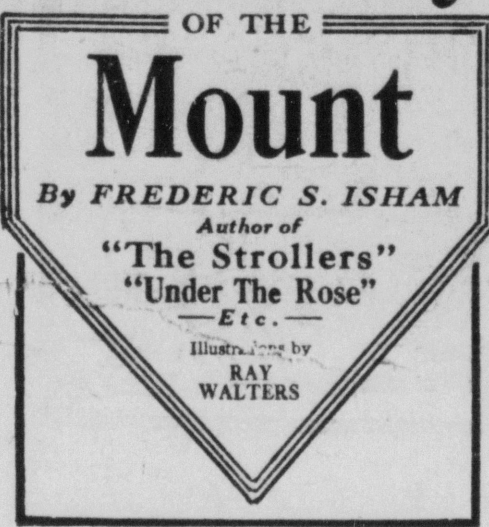

The liquor traffic is a cancer in society, eating out its vitals and threatening destruction, and all attempt to regulate it will aggravate the evil. There must be no attempt to regulate the cancer; it must be eradicated, not a root must be left behind, for until this is done all classes must continue in danger of becoming victims of strong drink.—Abraham Lincoln.

The Lady

CHAPTER XVII.

The Mountebank and the Hunchback. Up the Mount with shambling step, head down-bent and the same stupid expression on his face, the mountebank went docilely, though not silently. To one of the soldiers at his side he spoke often, voicing that dull apprehension he had manifested when first ordered into custody.

"Do you think they'll put me in a dungeon?"

"Dungeon, indeed!" the man answered not ill-naturedly. "For such as you! No, no! They'll keep the oubliettes, calottes, and all the dark holes for people of consequence—traitors, or your fine gentry consigned by lettres de cachet."

"Then what do you think they will do with me?"

"Wait, and find out!" returned the soldier roughly, and the mountebank spoke no more for some time; held his head lower, until, regarding him, his guardian must needs laugh. "Here's a craven-hearted fellow! Well, if you really want to know, they'll probably lock you up for the night with the rest of rag-tag," indicating the other prisoners, a short distance ahead, "in the cellar, or almonry, or auberge des voleurs; and in the morning, if you're lucky and the Governor has time to attend to such as you, it may be you'll escape with a few stripes and a warning."

"The auberge des voleurs!—the thieves' inn!" said the man. "What is that?"

"Bah! You want to know too much! If now your legs only moved as fast as your tongue—" And the speaker completed the sentence with a significant jog on the other's shoulders. Whereupon the mountebank quickened his footsteps, once more ceased his questioning. It was the soldier who had not yet spoken, but who had been pondering a good deal on the way up, who next broke the silence.

"How did it end, Monsieur Mountebank?—the scene with the devil, I mean."

The man who had begun to breathe hard, as one not accustomed to climbing, or wearied by a long pilgrimage to the Mount, at the question ventured to stop and rest, with a hand on the granite balustrade of the little platform they had just reached. "In the death of the peasant, and a comic chorus of frogs," he answered.

"A comic chorus!" said the soldier. "That must be very amusing."

"It is," the mountebank said, at the same time studying, from where he stood, different parts of the Mount with cautious, sidelong looks; "but my poor frogs!—all torn! trampled!"

"Well, well!" said the other not unkindly. "You can mend them when you get out."

"When! If I only knew when that would be! What if I should have to stay here like some of the others?—pour etre oublié!—to be forgotten?"

"Pardon!" muttered the mountebank. "The hill—it is very steep."

"You look strong enough to climb a dozen hills, and if you're holding back for a chance to escape—"

"No, no!" protested the man. "I had no thought—do I not know that if I tried, your sword—"

"Quite right. I'd—"

"There, there!" said the other soldier, a big, good-natured appearing fellow. "He's harmless enough, and, as once more they moved on, "that tune of yours, Monsieur Mountebank," abruptly, "it runs in my head. Let me see—how does it go? The second verse, I mean—"

"Beat! beat! Mid marsh-muck and mire, For if any note Escapes a frog's throat, Beware my lord's ire!"

"Yes; that's the one. Not bad!" humming—

"For if any note Escapes a frog's throat, Beware my lord's ire!"

"Are the verses your own?"

"Oh, no! I'm only a poor player," said the mountebank humbly. "But an honest one," he added after a pause, "and this thieves' inn, Monsieur?" returning to the subject of his possible fate, "this auberge des voleurs—that sounds like a bad place for an honest lodging."

"It was once under the old monks, who were very merry fellows; but since the Governor had it restored, it has become a sober and quiet place. It is true there are iron bars instead of blinds, and you can't come and go, as they used to, but—"

"Is that it—up there?" And the mountebank pointed toward a ledge of rock, with strong flanking buttresses, outjutting beneath a mysterious-looking wall and poised over a sparsely-wooded bit of the lower Mount. "The gray stone building you can just see above the ramparts, and that opening in the cliff to the right, with something running down—that looks like plumbing—"

"Oh, that is for the wheel—"

"The wheel?"

"The great wheel of the Mount! It was built in the time of the monks and was used for—"

"Hold your tongue!" said the other soldier, and the trio entered the great gate, which had opened at their approach, and now closed quickly behind them.

For the first time in that isolated domain of the dreaded Governor, the mountebank appeared momentarily to forget his fears and gazed with interest around him. On every side new and varying details unfolded to the eye; structures that from below were etched against the sky in filmy lines, here resolved themselves into vast, solid, but harmonious masses.

Those ribbons of color that had seemed to fall from the woolly sky, to adorn these heights, proved, indeed, fallacious; more sober effects, the black touches of age, confronted the eye everywhere, save on one favored front—that of a newer period, an architectural addition whose intricate carvings and beautiful roses of stone invited and caught the warmer rays; whose little balcony held real buds and flowers, bright spots of pink dangling from, or nestling at, the window's edge.

"Yonder looks like some grand lady's bower," as he followed his captors past this more attractive edifice, the mountebank ventured to observe. "Now, perhaps, lives there—"

"Hark you, my friend," one of the soldiers brusquely interrupted; "a piece of advice. His Excellency likes not babblers, neither does he countenance gossip; and if you'd fare well, keep your tongue to yourself!"

"I'll—I'll try to remember," said the mountebank docilely, but as he spoke, looked back toward the balcony; at the gleaming reflection full on its windows; then a turn in the way cut off the pleasing prospect, and only the grim foundations of the lofty, heavier structure on one hand and the massive masonry ramparts on the other greeted the eye.

For some distance they continued along the narrow way, the mountebank bending lower under his load and observing the injunction put upon him, until the path, broadening, led them abruptly on to a platform where a stone house of ancient construction barred their further progress. But two stories in height, this building, an alien edifice amid loftier piles, stood sturdily perched on a precipitous cliff. The rough stonework of its front, darkened by time, made it seem almost a part of the granite itself, although the roof, partly demolished and restored, imparted to it an anomalous distinctness, the bright new tile prominent as patches on some dilapidated garment. In its doorway, beneath a monkish inscription, well-nigh obliterated, stood a dwarf, or hunchback, who, jingling a bunch of great keys, ill-humoredly regarded the approaching trio.

"What now?" The little man's welcome, as mountebank and soldiers came within earshot, was not reassuring. "Isn't it enough to make prisoners of all the scamps in Christendom without taking vagabond players into custody?"

"Orders, good Jacques!" said one of the soldiers in a conciliatory tone. "The commandant's!"

"The commandant!" grumbled the grotesque fellow. "It is all very well, mimicking: 'Turn them over to Jacques. He'll find room.' If this keeps on, we'll soon have to make cages of confessionals, or turn the wine-butts in the old cellar into oubliettes."

"If any of our ancient flavor lingers in the casks, your guests would have little reason to complain!" returned the other soldier. "But this fellow, he'll make no trouble—"

"Oh, I suppose we'll have to take care of him!" muttered the dwarf. "In the thieves' inn there's always room for one more!" Obeying the gesture, at once menacing and imperious, that accompanied these words, the mountebank stepped forward, and the soldier, who had been eying his prospective host not without visible signs of misgiving, reluctantly entered.

But as he did so, he looked back; toward the soldier who had displayed half-friendly interest in the play.

"If you care to know more about the place—" he began, when the maledictions and abuse of the misshapen keeper put a stop to further conversation and sent the mountebank post-haste into the darkness of the cavern-like hall intersecting the ground floor.

On either side closed doors, vaguely discerned, hinted at the secrets of the chambers they guarded; the atmosphere, dark and close, proclaimed the sunlight long a stranger there. At the end of the hall the dwarf, who had walked with the assurance of one well acquainted with that musty interior and all it contained, paused; shot sharply a look and drew out a coat. The action was the signal for a chorus of hoarse voices from within, and the little man stayed not on the order of his going, but, thrusting the mountebank across the threshold, leaped nimbly back, slammed hard the door, and locked it.

Cries of disappointment and rage followed, and, facing the company that crowded the dingy little room almost to suffocation, the latest comer found himself confronted by unkempt people who shook their fists threateningly and execrated in no uncertain manner. A few, formerly spectators of his little play, inclined again to vent their humor on him, but he regarded them as if unaware of their feeling; pushed none too gently to a tiny window, and, depositing his burden on the stone floor, seated himself on a stool with his back to the wall.

As a squally gust soon blows itself out, so their temper, mercurial, did not long endure; from a ragged coat one produced dice, another cards, and, although there were few souls to exchange hands, the hazard of tossing and shuffling exercised its usual charm and held them. The minutes wore away; motionless in his corner, the mountebank now watched; then with his head on his elbow, seemed sunk in thought. Once he rose; stood on his stool and looked out between the heavy bars of the narrow window. "Not much chance to get out that way," observed a fellow prisoner. "What did you see?"

"Only a chasm in the sands."

"The sands!" said the man. "Cursed the day I set foot on them!"

To this malediction the other did not answer; stepped down and, again seated in his corner, waited, while the light that had grudgingly entered the narrow aperture grew fainter. With the growing darkness the atmosphere seemed to become closer, more foul; but although he breathed with difficulty, the mountebank suffered no sign of impatience or concern to escape him; only more alertly looked and listened—to a night bird cleaving the air without; to muttered sounds, thieves' patois, or snatches of ribald mirth within; and, ere long, to new complainings.

"Our supper! What of our supper?"

"The foul fiend take the auberge des voleurs and its landlord!"

"Vrai dieu! Here he comes!" as the footsteps were heard without.

And the door, opening, revealed, indeed, in the rushlight, now dimly illuminating the hall, the hunchback, not laden, however, with the longed-for creature comforts, but empty-handed; at his back the commandant and a number of soldiers.

"You fellow with the dolls!" Blinking in the glare of the torches, the dwarf peered in. "Where are you? Come along!" as the mountebank rose, "you are wanted."

"Wanted?" repeated the player, stepping forward. "Where?"

"At the palace," said the commandant.

"The palace!" stopping short. "Who can want me there?"

"Who?" The dwarf made a grimace. "Who?" he repeated mockingly.

"Her ladyship," said the commandant, with a reproving glance at the jester.

"Her ladyship!"

"Haven't you ears, my man?" The commandant frowned and made an impatient gesture. "Come, bestir yourself! The Governor's daughter has commanded your presence."

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Mountebank and My Lady. "The Governor's daughter!" Had the light been stronger they must have seen the start the mountebank gave. "Impossible!"

"Eh? What?" Surprised in turn, the officer gazed at him. "You dare—out with him!" To the soldiers.

But in a moment had the mountebank recovered his old demeanor, and, without waiting for the troopers to obey the commandant's order, walked voluntarily toward the door and into the passage.

"Our supper! Our supper!" A number of the prisoners, crowding forward, began once more to call lustily, when again was the disk-studded woodwork swung unceremoniously to, cutting short the sound of their lamentations.

"Dogs!" Malevolently the dwarf gazed back. "To want to gorge themselves on a holy day!"

"Pious Jacques!" murmured the commandant. "But I always said you made a model landlord!"

"When not interfered with!" grumbled the other.

"At any rate he doesn't seem to appreciate his good fortune," with a glance at the mountebank.

"No," jeering. "A gallant cavalier to step blithely at a great lady's command! 'Your Ladyship overwhelms me!' bowing grotesquely. 'Your Ladyship's condescension—'"

"Why, then, need you take me?" interposed the mountebank quickly.

"Can you not tell her ladyship I am not fit to appear in her presence—an uncouth clown—"

"Bah! I've already done that," answered the commandant.

"But how came her ladyship to know of me—here?"

"How indeed?"

"And what does she want of me?"

"That," roughly, "you will find out!" and stepped down the hall, followed by the soldiers, mountebank and dwarf, the last of whom took leave of them at the door.

Clear was the night; the stars, like liquid drops about to fall, caressed with silvery rays the granite piles. In contrast to the noisome atmosphere of the prison, faint perfumes, borne from some flowery slope of the distant shore, swept languorously in and out the open aisles and passages of the Mount. In such an hour that upper region seemed to belong entirely to the sky; to partake of its wondrous stillness; to share its mysteries and its secrets. Like intruders, penetrating an enchanted spot, now they trod soft shadows; then, clangorous, beat beneath foot delicate laceworks of light.

"Here we are!" The officer stopped. At the same time upon a nearby balcony a nightingale began to sing, tentatively, as if trying the scope and quality of its voice. "You are to go in!" he announced abruptly.

"Such a fine palace! I—I would rather not!" muttered the fellow, as they crossed an outer threshold and proceeded to mount some polished stairs.

"Stubborn dolt. Now in you march," pausing before a door. "But, hark you! I and my men remain without. So, mind your behavior, or—" A look from the commandant completed the sentence.

Alone, in an apartment of the palace, some moments later, the mountebank's demeanor underwent a quick change; he glanced hastily toward the door the commandant had closed in leaving, and then, with sudden brightening gaze, around him, as if making note of every detail of his surroundings. Set with columns of warm-hued marble, relieved with ornate carvings and designs, the spacious chamber presented an appearance at once graceful and charming. Nor were its furnishings at variance with its architectural elegance; on every hand soft colors met the eye, in rugs of ancient pattern; in tapestries, subdued; in the upholstery of Breton oak. A culminating note was in the center of the room, where a great bunch of roses opened wide their petals.

But briefly, however, the clown permitted himself to survey, or study, these details of refinement and luxury; the swift eager interest that had shone from the dark eyes gave way to an expression, lack-luster and stupid; his countenance once more resumed its blank, stolid aspect. As if unconscious of the anomalous figure he presented, mechanically had he seated himself; was gazing down, when through a doorway, opposite the one by which the commandant had left, a slender form appeared. Under the heavy, whitened lids a slight movement of the clown's eyes alone betrayed he was aware of that new presence. A moment the girl stood there, her glance resting on the grotesque, bent figure before her; then with a quizzical lift of the delicate brows she entered.

"You believe, no doubt, in making yourself at home?"

Crossing to the table, once more she stopped; her figure, sheathed in a gown of brocade of rose, glowed bright and distinct in contrast to the faint, vari-colored tints of ancient embroideries on the wall. Above, the light threw a shimmer on the deep-burnished gold of her hair; the sweeping lashes veiled the half-disdainful, half-amused look in her brown eyes.

"Or, perhaps, you are one of those who think the peasants will some day sit, while the lords and ladies stand?"

"I don't know," he managed to answer, but got up, only to appear more awkward.

"You do not seem to know very much, indeed!" she returned, her tone changing to one of cold severity. "Not enough, perhaps, to perceive the mischief you may cause! That play of yours, which I witnessed today—"

"You! Today? Your Ladyship was—"

"Yes," imperiously, "I was there! And heard and saw the effect it had on the people; how it stirred all their baser passions! But you, of course, could not know—or care, thinking only of the sous!—that, instead of teaching a lesson, the piece would only move them to anger, or resentment."

"I—your Ladyship—great lords have commended the play—"

"Great lords!" she began, but stopped; regarded her listener and shrugged her shoulders.

A few moments silence lasted, the fellow apparently not knowing what to say, or if he was expected to say anything, while, for her part, the girl no longer looked at him, but at the flowers, taking one, which she turned in her fingers.

"Your Ladyship would command me—"

"To give the play no more!"

"But—" Expostulation shone from his look.

"In which event you shall be suffered to go free tomorrow."

"But my livelihood! What shall I do, if I am forbidden to earn—"

She gave him a colder look. "I have spoken to the commandant; told him what I had seen, and that I did not think you intended to make trouble. Your case will, therefore, not be reported to his Excellency. Only," with a warning flash, "if you are again caught giving the play, you must expect to receive your deserts."

"Of course! If your Ladyship commands!" dejectedly.

"I do! But, as an offset to the coppers you might otherwise receive, I will give you a sum of money sufficient to compensate you."

"Your Ladyship is so generous!" He made an uncouth gesture of gratitude and covetousness. "May I ask your Ladyship how much—"

"How much?" scornfully. "But I suppose—"

The words died away; her glance fell; lingered on the hand he had extended. Muscular, shapely, it seemed not adapted to the servile gesture; was most unlike the hand of clod or clown. Moreover, it was marked with a number of wounds, half-healed, which caught and held her look.

"Of course, I am so poor, your Ladyship—" he began, in yet more abject tone, but stopped, attracted in turn by the direction of her gaze; then, meeting it, quickly withdrew the hand and thrust it into his pocket. Not in time, however, to prevent a startled light, a swift gleam of recollection from springing into her eyes! The very movement—ironically enough!—was not without precedent.

"You!" She recoiled from him. "The Black—"

As a man who realizes he has betrayed himself, he bit his lips; but attempted no further subterfuge. The shambling figure straightened; the dull eyes grew steady; the bold self-possession she remembered well on another occasion again marked his bearing.

"Your Ladyship has discerning eyes," he remarked quietly, but as he spoke glanced and moved a little toward the window.

My lady stood as if dazed. He, the Black Seigneur, there, in the palace! Mechanically she raised her hand to her breast; she was very pale. On the balcony the nightingale, grown confident, burst into a flood of variations; a thousand trills and full-throated notes filled the room.

"I understand now," at length she found voice, "why that fancy came to me below, when I was listening to the play on the platform. But why have you come—to the very Mount itself?"

Her voice trembled a little. "You! On the beach the people tried to stop you—"

"You saw that, too?"

"And you knew the play would make trouble! You wanted it to," quickly. "For what purpose? To get into the upper part of the Mount? To have them arrest—bring you here?"

She looked at him with sudden terror. "My father! Was it to—"

A low, distinct rapping at the door she had entered, interrupted them. She started and looked fearfully around. At the same time the mountebank stepped back to the side of a great bronze in front of the balcony, where, standing in the shadow, he was screened.

"Eli!" a voice called out. The flower the girl had been holding fell to the floor.

SCROFULOUS TROUBLES

No truth is more forcibly manifested in physical life than the old saying "like begets like," for just as the offspring of healthy ancestry are blessed with pure, rich blood insuring good health, so the children of blood-tainted parentage inherit a polluted circulation which fosters a chain of scrofulous troubles. The usual sign of a scrofulous inheritance are swollen glands about the neck, weak eyes, pale, waxy complexions, sores and ulcers and general poor health. These symptoms are most often manifested in early life, though sometimes maturity is reached before the trouble breaks out. Treatment should be commenced at the first indication of Scrofula for it may get beyond control if allowed to run unchecked. S. S. S. is the very best treatment for Scrofula. It renovates the circulation and drives out all scrofulous matter and deposits. S. S. S. goes to the bottom of the trouble and removes the cause and cures the disease. Then it supplies the weak, blood with healthful properties. S. S. S. is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and is an absolutely safe remedy for young or old. Book on the blood and medical advice free.

AMPLE REASON FOR LEAVING

Wife, Perfectly Satisfied With Hotel, Had Heard Pretty Widow Wanted to Learn to Swim.

"My husband and I will leave in the morning," she said, addressing the clerk at the summer hotel. "So if you have a chance to rent our rooms you are at liberty to do so."

"I'm very sorry to hear that, Mrs. Smithers. I understand you intended to be with us for several weeks."

"We did expect to stay quite a while, but we are changing our plans. Haven't you found the table satisfactory? If there is anything that you wish we will be glad—"

"Oh, no, it isn't that. The table is very good. I shall recommend it to my friends."

"Perhaps your rooms are not just what you would—"

"The rooms are very nice, thank you. I haven't any fault to find with them."

"I should be greatly obliged to you if you would tell me why you are leaving. If it is because of any fault on the part of the management we shall be only too glad to—"

"No no. Everything is very nice as far as the management is concerned. I have just overheard that good-looking young widow who arrived last night saying that she was anxious to learn to swim."

In No Degree.

"Supposing women had the right to vote and to hold public offices."

"Yes."

"Your daughter might be sent to congress."

"Well, what if she were?"

"Could you afford to hire a chaperon to go to Washington with her?"

"Lord love you, a girl who can be trusted to ride in our cars during the rush hours, without a chaperon, could get along all right in congress, I guess."

PAYMENT ORDERED FOR IMPROVEMENTS

ter was referred to the board of public works.

Sherman Day reported that several persons had objected to him regarding the manner in which the garbage had been removed recently and thought that the garbage collector should be given further instructions. Councilman Davison, chairman of the board of public works, said that he had heard a large number of complaints but that out of thirty-eight filed with him a personal investigation showed that only two of them were justifiable. A number of alleys are closed on account of street improvements, and it is almost impossible for the garbage collector to carry away the refuse as regularly as he would if all the alleys and streets were open. Occasion was taken at this time to state that there was an ordinance providing that garbage should be kept in a certain way and when tin cans, brush, glass and other scraps were thrown in with the garbage, the collector was not responsible for its removal. Councilman Davison said that he was very anxious that the city should be kept healthful and that there were still a few people who paid no attention to the city ordinance with the result that garbage upon their premises was not carried away. He also stated that in a number of cases property owners gave the garbage to individuals and then when these failed to make the usual collection they expected the city collector to do the work. The complaints filed will be looked into and if justifiable will be given proper attention.

The question of paying the rent for the clock in the tower of the opera house was brought before the council and an opinion asked of the city attorney, who has looked into the legality of the bill which was filed for $75. Upon the request of Councilman Misch, however, the city attorney did not give his report as Mr. Misch desired to look into the matter more closely and determine the matter once for all. A report will be made at the next council meeting.

Councilmen Davison and Misch reported that a number of crossings in the Third ward needed repair, and as there would be some stone available in that part of the city soon, the street commissioner was ordered to repair them.

Misch reported that a telephone pole in the alley at the rear of the Husted building interfered with a door in the barn and the telephone company was instructed to remove the pole.

It was also stated that there were several wires belonging to the electric light company which had come in contact with the trees in various parts of the city, and the company was instructed to give these attention at once as damage was being done to the trees.

Councilman Misch reported that there had been some objection to the manner in which the brick streets on Second were swept, and the sweeper was instructed to give the work more careful attention. He also reported that an engine had broken a crossing on Centennial street and the street commissioner was ordered to repair the same at once.

Sherman Day said that the street commissioner had cleaned up some of the weeds in the southwest part of the city and it was ordered that a notice be published instructing the people throughout the city to keep the sidewalks free from obnoxious weeds.

The city marshal was instructed to notify several persons to clean up the vacant lots which have become filled with weeds and trash.

W. R. Day of the park committee reported that he had plans for the mounting of the cannons in the city park on concrete foundation and that it was estimated that the work could be done for about $50. Councilman Misch was of the opinion that concrete plans for the improvement of the park should be prepared and that before any of the work was done an estimate on the total cost should be given. Councilman Rodapp, chairman of the park committee, reported that specifications would be completed by the next council meeting at which time the committee would be able to give an estimate upon the cost. The councilmen seemed to believe that the park should be given some attention, and that the money, which was in the park fund, should be expended for that purpose before the close of the year.

The city engineer reported that the alley in the interurban block, running east and west between Indianapolis avenue and Ewing street, had been completed and that the assessment roll had been prepared. According to the report the improvement cost $893.94, but the assessment would probably be changed a few cents. The assessments stood substantially as follows:

C. T. H. & S. E. $547.40
C. W. Burkart 48.75
J. M. Brown 34.80
Mrs. Margaret Matt 27.85

SOCIAL EVENTS.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Mrs. Demas Perlee was given a delightful surprise Thursday evening at her home on North Walnut by about twenty of her friends who gathered at her home in her absence in honor of her birthday anniversary.

The affair was well planned and the surprise was complete. The evening was spent with games and some clever contests. Ice cream and cake were served. Mrs. Perlee received a number of handsome presents. The out of town guests were Dr. George W. Perlee and Miss Ethel Perlee of Indianapolis.

PICNIC.

Miss Myrtle Gilbert entertained the primary class of the Woodstock Sunday School with a picnic yesterday afternoon at the city park. A picnic luncheon was served, and the little folks enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon.

SLUMBER PARTY.

Miss Fay Everhart gave a slumber party Wednesday evening in honor of her house guests, Misses Grace Harms, Edith Davis and Lelia Whisman of Columbus. A luncheon was served at twelve o'clock. Those of the party besides the guests were the Misses Bernice White, Lillian Osterman, Esther Doane and Fay Everhart.

RECEPTION.

Mrs. Howard Brown and Mrs. Joseph E. McKinney have issued invitations for a reception at the home of the former, 401 Indianapolis Avenue, Thursday, July 25, for Mrs. W. H. McKinney of Texarkana, Ark.

AT EULAR FORDS.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Everhart, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gudgel, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Stewart and daughter spent today at Eular Ford near North Vernon.
